

Bilbao, Spain

The most important city in the Basque Country, in the North of Spain, Bilbao has risen from its knees and prospered. Now, with restored self-esteem, there's much more to the city than the world-class Guggenheim Museum. Calatrava's new airport, a graceful bird poised for flight. Calatrava has also spanned the river with his footbridge, strung like a harp over the water. Check out the heavenly metro system, designed by Foster. We can thank Bilbao's "wilderness years" for preserving the old groceries, the delis, and the shops specializing in ham and knives. Food is another trump card; Bilbao kept its links with the land and the sea and never forgot how to cook.

Miró Hotel Avantgarde Superior

Designed by fashion designer Antonio Miró, it is the first boutique-hotel in the city. The hotel fuses design and functionality at its best. It has been featured in the Condé Nast Traveler coolest new places to stay. The Hotel Miró has its own personality; every detail is designed to guarantee maximum comfort: dim lights to create a warm atmosphere, fine materials and up-to-date technologies. There are pieces of original and exclusive furniture throughout the property. The common areas are created to foster peace and conversation with a library with antique armchairs. The Miró Bar is the meeting point for art lovers; the gym and Miró SPA are a haven to the senses in the centre of the town.

Location: Located in a privileged spot of central Bilbao, between the Guggenheim Museum and the Fine Arts Museum.
