Palacio de los Navas Hotel

Epoque Classic Superior

This new small hotel is among the remaining buildings that have given this part of the city its distinguished look. It was originally a Palace – an aristocratic town house – in the 16th century. It has been skilfully restored, retaining most of its original architectural features. The rooms surround a central, typically Granadian columned patio. And in the courtyard you will find the sound of the central stone fountain - a soothing break from the street activity.

Location: The hotel is situated at the very heart of Granada's historical district: Calle Navas a point of reference for all people in Granada.
